PGA Six Event Winter Championships in Port St. Lucie*

SASKATOON, Sask. – Dryrainge, makers of golf’s premium range cover, announced today a new strategic partnership with The PGA of America as a supporting sponsor of the PGA Winter Championships held annually in January and February in Port St. Lucie, Florida.

Dryrainge will display one of its ‘Members Edition’ range cover units at each of the PGA Winter Championship series. The six events include the PGA Quarter Century, PGA Senior Stroke Play, PGA Senior-Junior Team, PGA Women’s Stroke Play, PGA Stroke Play and the PGA Match Play Championships. The series is held annually at PGA Golf Club, in PGA Village.

“PGA of America members represent the top of our pyramid demographic for Dryrainge,” said Bruce Rempel, President of Dryrainge. “As a company we understand the financial burden golf professionals suffer from cancelled lessons, demo days, golf schools or clinics due to inclement weather or harmful UV rays from the sun. Dryrainge eliminates that. It allows golf professionals, club members and guests to schedule and enjoy lessons in comfort. We’re looking forward to being involved with the PGA Winter Championships at PGA Golf Club and plan to show the participants how Dryrainge can have a significant impact on their revenue and operations.”

The PGA of America is pleased to have Dryrainge involved as a new strategic partner for the PGA Winter Championships, a tournament series that began in 1954 at the former PGA National Golf Club in Dunedin, Florida

"The PGA of America is proud that Dryrainge, a company that takes pride in sustaining all-weather golf enjoyment and the livelihood of PGA Professionals, will serve as a supporting sponsor of the PGA Winter Championships," said PGA of America President Allen Wronowski. "The PGA Winter Championships have been a valued tradition for our members for nearly six decades, and we look forward to this partnership with Dryrainge to showcase its products that may boost our member professionals' business operations."
